WELCOME MESSAGE

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT DR. GERVAN FEARON

GEORGE BROWN COLLEGE has for many years been known as a thriving post-secondary community in the heart of downtown Toronto. Through our programs and courses, we provide essential skills and knowledge to a diverse student body and, through our city-building efforts, we foster vibrant neighbourhoods and communities.

The city is our classroom and because of that, we know that our community is made of more than just a place, a campus, and those who study and work here at any given moment.

Our George Brown community thrives over time as well - through the work and contributions of you, our community of alumni, who every day take what they have learned at George Brown and apply in your careers, lives, communities to shape a remarkable legacy.

As I enter my third year as President of George Brown College, I stand in awe of this living legacy of ours. And as you will see in the pages of this, our first annual digital Alumni publication, there is much to be awestruck about.

Limberlost Place, Ontario's first institutional mass-timber, zero-emissions building, rises at George Brown College's Waterfront Campus thanks to the skill, knowledge and hard work of George Brown graduates. Before it even opens in 2024, it has garnered several winning awards. It will be a learning lab and a part of our efforts to contribute to a vibrant city.

When Limberlost Place is opened, George Brown's Brookfield Sustainability Institute will move onto the 10th floor, where it will continue the groundbreaking work by students and alumni, in partnership with industry and government, to find practical and immediate solutions to our ongoing climate crisis.

You can read more about Limberlost Place and Brookfield Sustainability in these pages – and discover the remarkable contributions of your fellow alumni far beyond the College and its initiatives.

George Brown graduates are leaders who generously share their skills and knowledge through mentoring, volunteerism, and scholarship initiatives. They create jobs, deliver vital services, construct homes and infrastructure, and enhance lives. With their wisdom, our alumni help advance industries and sectors forward, keeping pace with evolving technology and best practices.

Year by year, George Brown alumni numbers grow. In June, 4,700 students graduated from George Brown College programs bring our total number of alumni members to over 280,000. I look forward to seeing, hearing and celebrating the contributions that our alumni make to our community, our country and around our connected world.

I want all of our alumni from many years past to know: you are always welcome here at George Brown College: to share your knowledge certainly, but also to refresh and build on the skills demanded by an ever-changing world. Join us in furthering the growth and impact taking place through the initiatives of George Brown College.

At George Brown, we understand that learning is a life-long endeavour, and we will be here to help facilitate that learning.

Please - let us stay connected in the years ahead. Come back and engage with us. Follow Alumni Relations on LinkedIn. Visit George Brown College's Alumni Benefits website, to learn of the many perks, benefits and events available to you as an alumnus.

And remember: We are here for you, just as so many of you have been here for us.

CELEBRATING ALUMNI SUCCESS

CHRIS CAMPBELL

Chris Campbell, George Brown Carpentry Apprentice making a difference in the community

CARPENTER, UNION LEADER AND EQUITY, DIVERSITY and inclusion champion Chris Campbell is passionate about helping others succeed in the skilled trades. When he delivered a keynote address at a 2022 George Brown College convocation ceremony, he shared a Maya Angelou quote that guides his efforts. "When you learn, teach. When you get, give." Campbell is a proud graduate of George Brown's Carpentry Apprentice program and the Director of Diversity, Inclusion and Equity for the Carpenters' Regional Council. He travels across the province to talk to industry reps, visit job sites, and connect young people to meaningful career options. Campbell is also Vice-President of the Toronto Carpenter's Union, Local 27.

"From Thunder Bay to Sarnia, you can't assume that things are the way they are in Toronto. So I go to each community, engage people and listen to what they're saying," he says, all with the goal of increasing diversity in the field and promoting inclusive hiring practices and industry policies.

CONNECTING YOUTH TO OPPORTUNITIES IN THE SKILLED TRADES

For more than two decades, Campbell has been laser focused on connecting Black and Indigenous youth and youth from other diverse communities to opportunities in the skilled trades. He meets with young people at their places of worship, community centres, and other social hubs.

Following transit expansion and other development announcements in Toronto, he worked with developers to ensure they provided employment opportunities for young people from the surrounding areas. This work laid the foundation for the Toronto Community Benefits Network, of which he is now Chair of the Board of Directors.

Campbell sits on several other construction industry and community boards and committees, including the George Brown College Foundation Board of Directors, the Coalition of Black Trade Unionists and the Toronto Police Black Community Consultative Committee. He also volunteers for The Children's Breakfast Clubs.

ADDRESSING RACISM ON JOB SITES

When asked about the working environment for Black people in the trades, Campbell admits it wasn't great when he was coming up, but positive changes are happening — changes he is helping to push forward.

"When I reflect, I say, yeah, that happened to me, but I was too driven by wanting to make something of myself that I didn't pay much attention to it at the time," he said. "I can remember some of the conversations, word for word."

When questioned by the media or anyone else about racism on the job, Campbell says he speaks openly and honestly about the issues.

"I tell both sides, the good and the bad, the challenges and the success."

WORK THAT RESONATES WITH NEW TRADESPEOPLE

The advice, support and straight talk Campbell provides have meant a lot to many. He said he often receives emails and phone calls from people he has helped get work in the skilled trades.

"Earlier in my career, there were a lot of Caribbean folks, but today it's more international. You have people from Africa, Asia, and all over the world," he said. "So, it tells me that maybe what I did and said resonated with them."

JULIA HUYNH

Alum Mentor Julia Huynh Aims to Help International Business Students Overcome Challenges

JULIA HUYNH HAD ALREADY completed a law degree in Vietnam when she decided to pursue her dream of studying abroad and finding a career that aligned more with her passions. After a successful journey at George Brown College pursuing marketing and an interest in mental health advocacy, she’s now giving back as an alumni mentor to current students through the Centre for Business’ Student-Alumni Mentorship Program.

“I received a lot of support and guidance from the College, especially the academic advisors and Student Association, which helped me take my first step toward a successful career. Now I want to give back and help other international students who may be facing similar challenges I did,” said Huynh, referencing language barriers, financial struggles and entering the Canadian job market, all of which can take a toll on a student’s mental health.

Back in Vietnam, Huynh had been looking to explore her full potential. She heard that George Brown College has a reputation as a leading educational institution among Vietnamese students, as well as the competitive advantage of gaining practical work experience in addition to education.

When she arrived in Canada, Huynh’s path led to class leadership roles, being on the Dean’s List and graduating with honours, already having received a job offer from the wholesale supply company she worked at for her co-op program. Now she works as a freelance digital marketer and is preparing for permanent residency alongside acting as a mentor.

PROVIDING CAREER GUIDANCE

For Huynh, mentoring is more than just advising on necessary marketing skills. What excites her the most is guiding her mentees in choosing the right career path and helping them discover their passion for their profession. Additionally, she also emphasizes the development of important soft skills such as time management, problem-solving, critical thinking and teamwork.

“I feel proud and honoured to have the opportunity to give back to the community,” said Huynh. “Returning to George Brown College to assist students, especially international students, is a refreshing experience for me. I am delighted to learn from the vision of the Mentorship Program and find it fulfilling to live and work with a sense of purpose.”

As for advice to students, Huynh recommends that they make the most of their time in college because it’s an investment for their future, and remember to prioritize their well-being.

“Living abroad can be stressful at times, but there are resources available on campus to help students cope with these challenges,” said Huynh. “Don’t hesitate to reach out and seek support when you need it. You’re not alone in this journey. With hard work, dedication and a positive mindset, you can achieve your goals towards your future career.”

George Brown offers a range of services and supports for international students. Learn more on the Current International Students page.

LOOK OUT FOR THE ARTWORK of George Brown College graduate Emily Clairoux on the TTC (Toronto Transit Commission) throughout June for National Indigenous History Month.

Clairoux is an artist from the Algonquins of Pikwàkanagàn First Nation and a graduate of the Community Worker program. Her piece called Mino Pimadiziwin – That Good Way (pictured) will be featured across the TTC system, wrapped on transit vehicles. Clairoux's description on the TTC's website says the piece "reminds many Indigenous peoples to walk in a good way or live in that good way."

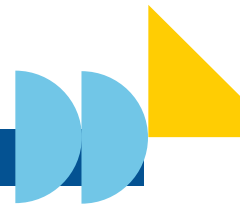

"As for what this means to me, it's a huge accomplishment," she says. "When I was growing up, not a lot of people believed in me and I didn't believe in myself. It is so validating to have been chosen to share my art with such a large audience."

Clairoux makes jewellery, tote bags and other items featuring her art, which her TTC profile says is inspired by her "community and teachings she's picked up along the way." She produces her work under Eagle Woman Arts (@eaglewomanarts on Instagram).

KEVIN BUCK AND DARRYL SHOTLANDER

From George Brown College to Michelin Stardom: How Alumni Foster Culinary Success Worldwide

AT GEORGE BROWN COLLEGE, students benefit from an extensive network of fellow alumni—both in and out of the classroom. As a recent graduate of the college's Italian Culinary Arts postgraduate program, Darryl Shotlander has experienced firsthand the life-changing perks of tapping into the strong network of mentorship and support the college offers.

As part of his postgraduate program, Shotlander (pictured chef on the left) had the incredible opportunity to complete a three-month internship at a restaurant in Italy. After expressing his dream of working at the famed three-Michelin-star restaurant Osteria Francescana to his professor and program coordinator Chef Dario Tomaselli, Tomaselli reached out to George Brown alum and chef Allen Huynh—who just so happened to be working in the kitchen at the acclaimed Massimo Bottura restaurant in Modena, Italy.

The plan was set in motion, and Shotlander packed his bags for Italy to embark on the beginning of his culinary journey overseas.

“Chef Alan was a fantastic mentor and taught me to take a creative and narrative approach to preparing food,” Shotlander says, as he reflects back on the profound experience of working at one of the world’s best restaurants. “The way he coached me changed my whole career trajectory and how I think about food.”

After completing his internship in Italy and graduating from the program, Shotlander knew he wanted to continue pursuing his career abroad, and he had his eyes set on the thriving culinary scene in London. Chef Tomaselli again jumped at the opportunity to help Shotlander achieve his goals, connecting him with Kevin Buck, also an alum of the Italian program and of the Culinary Management program, who currently works as a sous-chef at Above at HIDE—another esteemed Michelin-rated restaurant.

Hearing the high praise from Chef Tomaselli and knowing that Shotlander had received the same level of guidance and mentorship from George Brown’s faculty that he had experienced, Buck (pictured chef on the right) felt it was an easy decision to extend the new grad an invitation to come to London and do a trial shift at his restaurant.

Shotlander is grateful for the advice and support he’s received from Chef Buck in the lead-up to London, as he navigates the possibility of moving and working abroad.

“Kevin has been so helpful in guiding me through this process of essentially immigrating to a new country, especially since he’s gone through it himself,” Shotlander says. “He doesn’t even know me, apart from a few video calls, so what he’s doing for me is amazing.”

Buck, whose experience since graduating has included competing in the prestigious culinary competition Bocuse d’Or and working at the three-Michelin-star Frantzén in Sweden, credits his impressive trajectory to his education at George Brown.

“Each place that I’ve worked has taught me something new,” he says, “but it was my time at GBC that laid the foundation for me to become successful in this industry.”

Buck also won the 2023 Chef of the Year award from the British Culinary Federation. He was among 14 finalists vying for the top prize on June 12 at the University College of Birmingham’s Competition Kitchen.

Chefs Buck and Shotlander have shown, it’s clear George Brown’s alumni network is much more than a list of names—it’s a culture of support and collaboration, reminding students that education extends well beyond the school walls.

For current George Brown culinary students who wish to emulate Buck’s success, he emphasizes that networking is the secret ingredient to following in his footsteps.

Student Success Story – Your Support Makes an Impact!

THANKS TO THE GENEROUS support of our donors, students across all programs at George Brown College can pursue their academic and professional goals every year.

This year, one of these students was Christian Sotouadeh, a first-year student at the Angelo DelZotto School of Construction Management, and the winner of the Centre for Construction and Engineering Technologies (CCET) Sustainability Award. This award is given to students who demonstrate not only academic excellence, but innovative and sustainable ideas through their capstone project research. Here is his story:

“A year ago, I wouldn't have pictured myself earning an award. I didn't see myself going back to school to restart my post-secondary education. However, I grew a strong interest in this program. At first, I was nervous, and the course load was overwhelming. However, I told myself, this is it, it's time to advance and make up for all the time I lost exploring different career paths. Here I am a year later, with the utmost confidence I have in my abilities, and a passion for what I'm learning.”

“The truth is, not everyone will know what they want to do in life, however, you can never wait for it. You must seize every opportunity as if it were your last. I'm beyond grateful to receive an award commending all the early mornings and hard work that no one else sees, as well as minimizing the financial burden of tuition.”

Christian's journey to George Brown College is just one example of how your support impacts students' lives both inside and outside of the classroom. To learn more about setting up an award and supporting our students and alumni please visit:

The George Brown College Foundation:

THE GEORGE BROWN COLLEGE Foundation serves as the primary fundraising vehicle for George Brown College. Together with our donors, we work to ensure that no student is denied post-secondary education because of financial constraints. We achieve this goal by raising money to support student success through scholarships and bursaries, as well as other significant initiatives.

The generosity of our GBC alumni has been critical to the success of our students - from the creation of new scholarships, providing career opportunities for graduates, and especially supporting them through the recent challenges of the pandemic. With the rising costs of living, students need your help more than ever to pursue their academic and career goals.

VALUED ALUMNI

THE ALUMNI RELATIONS OFFICE has the primary role of engaging alumni and keeping the college community informed on the evolving careers and accomplishments of our graduates. This enables us to celebrate their success, continue to support learning, and provide opportunities for graduates to give back.

George Brown College's more than 280,000 alumni are highly respected and valued members of the College's broader community and are vital partners in helping to fulfill College goals and objectives. With 65% of our graduates engaging with the college in some manner, it's clear that we are building mutually beneficial relationships. Many alumni are returning to campus to take advantage of lifelong learning opportunities, and many are hiring fellow alumni and hosting our students in work-integrated learning opportunities.

Graduating from college is a significant achievement and as a gesture of appreciation for all your hard work, we offer our graduates a well-deserved reward of significant discounts at selected restaurants, entertainment venues, and a variety of preferred services. These discounts can help alleviate some of the financial burdens often associated with transitioning into the workforce, enabling our grads to indulge in well-deserved leisure activities without breaking the bank.

We are proud that George Brown's alumni are powerful contributors to the College's positive and growing reputation.

ALUMNI RELATIONS BELIEVES that interested and engaged alumni are vital members of the George Brown community and we work towards providing alumni with valuable engagement opportunities that are designed to help you stay connected, expand your networks, and get involved. Alumni Relations offers a variety of activities that we are constantly growing to complement your success, talents and interests.
